

Military Service in the 110th Congress

■ The 110th Congress includes 29 senators and 100 representatives with some military experience, as shown in this chart. Each line represents a current member, starting with the year their military service began and ending when they retired or were discharged. Many members' military experience came during Vietnam-era stints. In contrast, members with service in recent years tend to be career officers and long-time reservists. On the whole, however, military service among members is in decline.
