

2016 Ballot Access for Third Party Candidates

September 14, 2016

Producers: Ben Booker, Justin C. Brown and Madelaine Pisani

Edited by: Alistair Taylor

Director: Afzal Bari

Gary Johnson leads Libertarian party to ballot access in all 50 states

Libertarian party presidential ballot access

■ On the ballot

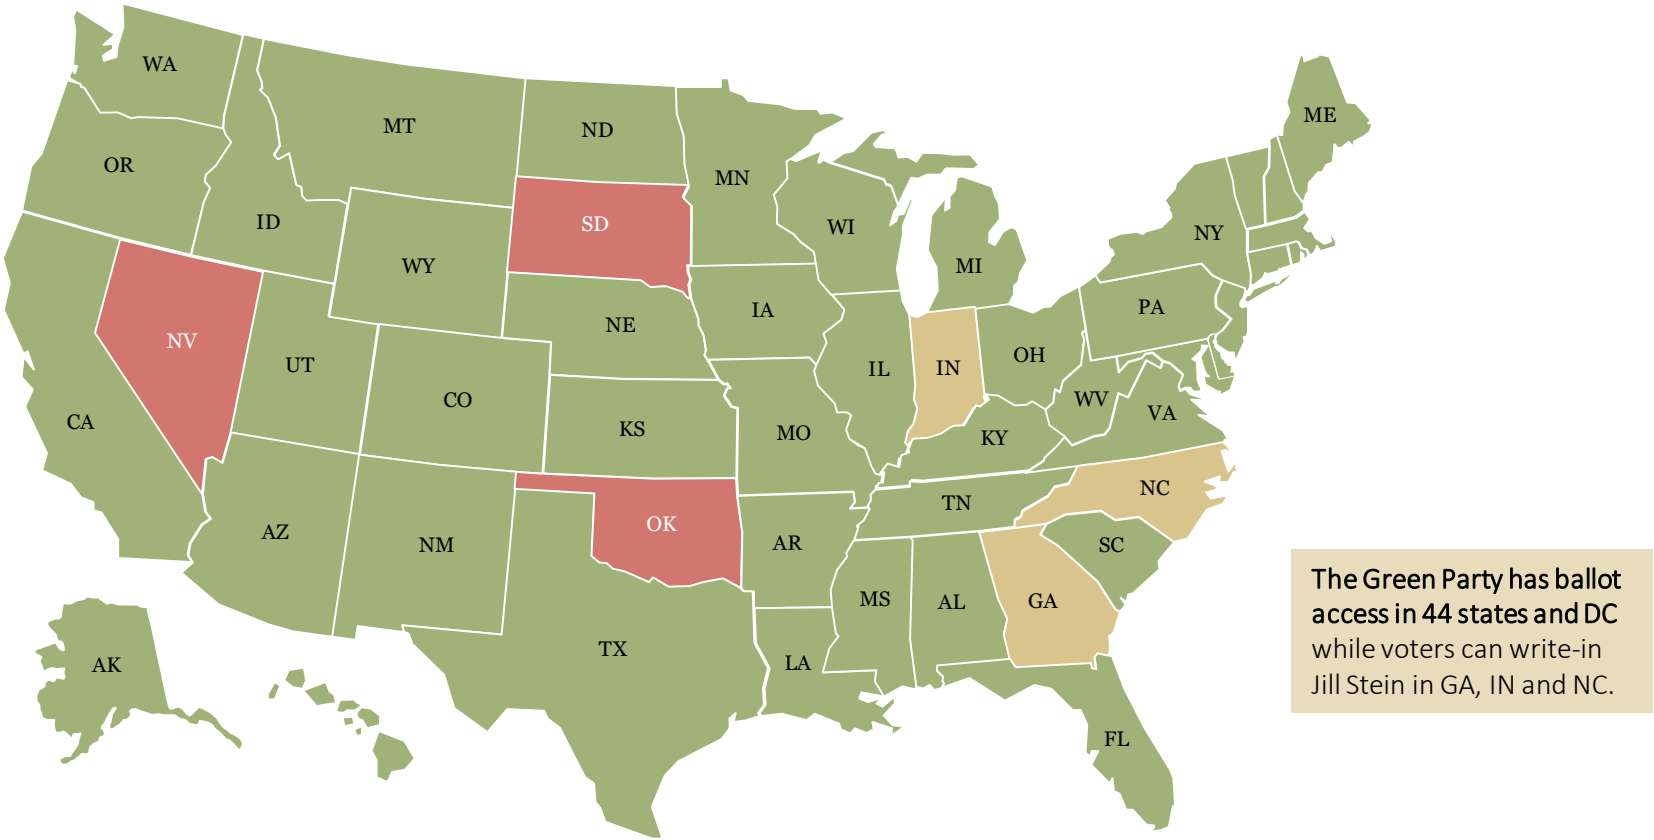

Gary Johnson and the Libertarian Party currently have the most accessible third party ticket as they are confirmed to be on the ballot in all 50 states and DC. This marks the first time since 1996 that a third-party candidate has secured full ballot access across the country.

Source: Libertarian Party, "2016 Presidential Ballot Access Map," 2016.

Jill Stein gains ballot access in most states, only shut out of 3 states

Green party presidential ballot access

■ On the ballot ■ Write-in option only ■ No ballot line or write-in option

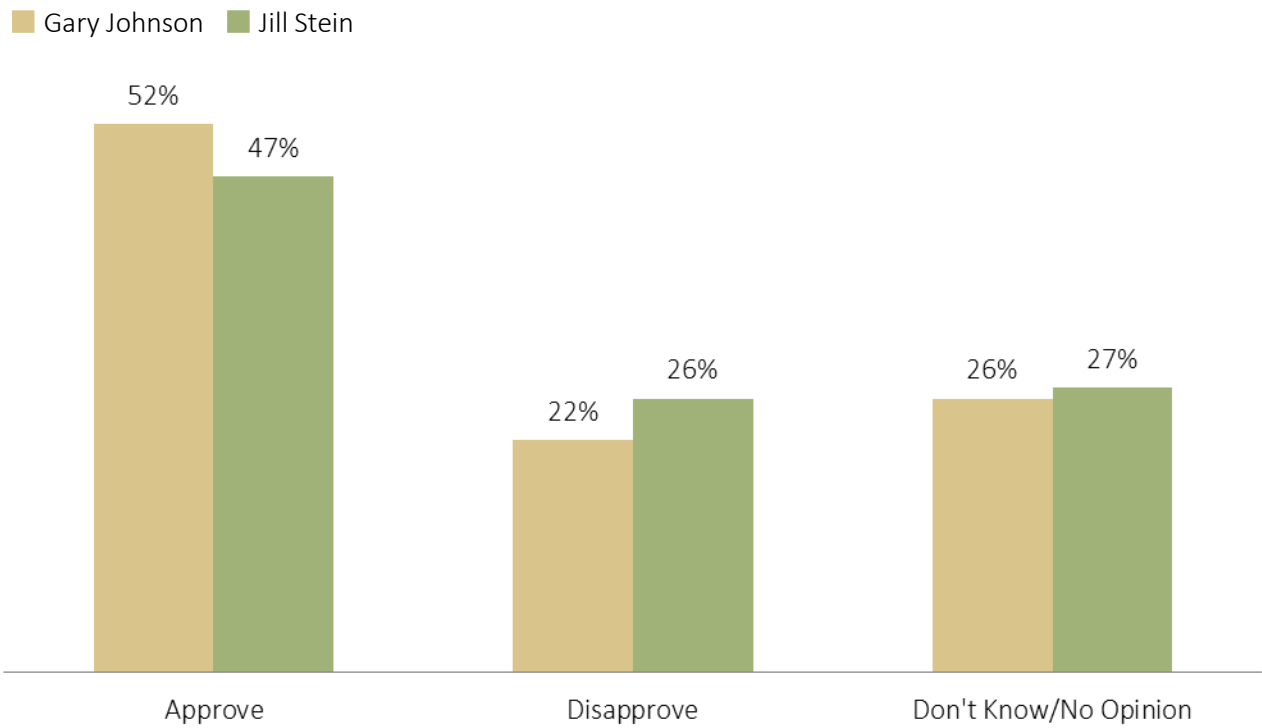

Source: Green Party US, "Ballot Access," 2016.

Evan McMullin's presidential ballot access

September 14, 2016 | Justin C. Brown, Ben Booker and Madelaine Pisani

A majority of voters want Gary Johnson to participate in presidential debates with Clinton and Trump

% of voters who think third party candidates should participate in debates

Presidential debate participation requirements

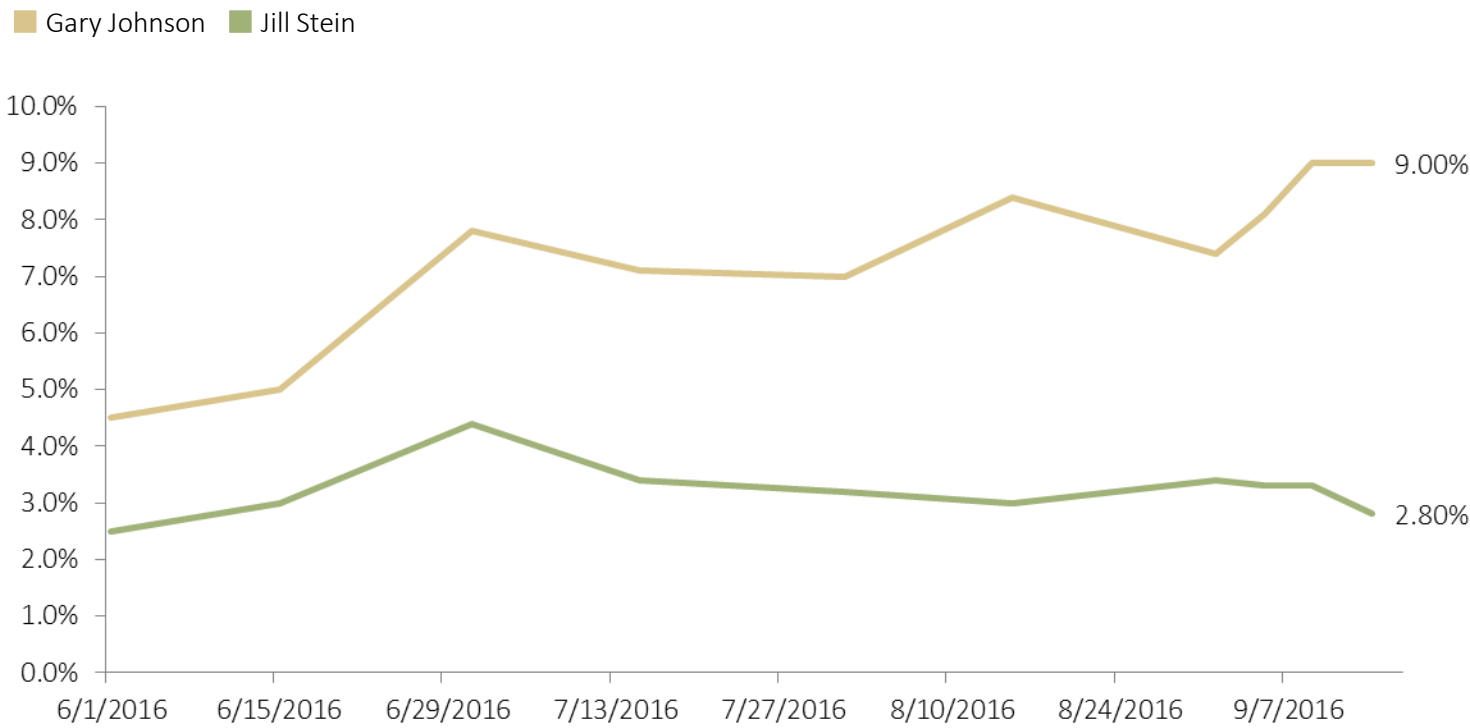

1. Must be constitutionally eligible to run for president
2. Must be on enough state ballots to have a chance of winning 270 electoral college votes.
3. Must have at least 15% of the national electorate supporting them. This support is calculated using the average of five national public opinion polls selected by the Commission on Presidential Debates.

Source: Eli Yokley, "Voters Want Gary Johnson, Jill Stein on Debate Stage," Morning Consult, September 1, 2016.

In the national polls, Johnson is at around 9% while Stein is at 2-3%

Polling Averages For Third Party Candidates

Candidates Must Have At Least 15% of Popular Support to be In Debates

Source: RealClear Politics, "General Election: Trump vs. Clinton vs. Johnson vs. Stein," September 14, 2016.