

Since Trump's election, Americans – especially women – are paying more attention to politics

Percentage who say they are paying ____ attention to politics since Trump's election

Pew study sheds lights on the impact of Trump's election

- Between June and July 2017, Pew researchers interviewed 2,505 American adults about their attention to politics
- More women than men – especially Democratic women – have paid greater attention to politics since Trump's election
- 59% of people – and 64% of women – say that is stressful and frustrating to talk about politics with people who differ in their opinion of Trump; only 35% find it interesting and informative
- White Democrats are more likely (74%) than black (56%) and Hispanic (61%) Democrats to say that it is stressful to talk about politics with those whose opinions about Trump differ

Sources: "Since Trump's Election, Increased Attention to Politics – Especially Among Women," Pew Research Center, July 20, 2017.