Split-ticket voting in statewide races hit a new low in Senate and gubernatorial races this cycle

Differences between margin of victory in Senate and gubernatorial races, by state

■ Republican senator and governor ■ Democratic senator and governor
■ Split party governor and senator

Difference between margin of victory in Senate and gubernatorial races

- 0.40
- 20.00
- 40.00
- 58.00

*Data collected as of November 16, 2018; results may have changed since then
Minnesota had two Senate races this year, only Sen. Amy Klobuchar's margin of victory is included in the map
Sources: Geoffrey Skelley, "Split-Ticket Voting Hit A New Low In 2018 Senate and Governor Races," FiveThirtyEight. November 19, 2018.

All but three races stayed within a 17-point margin between Senate and gubernatorial races

State	Senate margin of victory	Gov. margin of victory	Difference
MA	+25.5	+31.9	57.4
VT	+40.3	+14.6	54.9
MD	+33.4	+13.4	46.8
CT	+20.2	+3.1	17
AZ	+2	+14.4	16.5
HI	+42.3	+29	13.3
MN	+24.1	+11.4	12.7
ME	+19	+7.6	11.5
TX	+2.6	+13.3	10.7
NY	+33	+22.3	10.7

State	Senate margin of victory	Gov. margin of victory	Difference
OH	+6.4	+4.2	10.6
TN	+10.8	+21.1	10.2
WI	+10.9	+1.1	9.7
NM	+23.5	+14.3	9.2
RI	+23	+15.5	7.6
PA	+12.8	+16.8	4
MI	+6.4	+9.5	3
WY	+36.9	+39.8	2.9
NV	+5	+4.1	.9
MN	+10.6	+11.4	.8
NE	+19.2	+18.9	.4

*Data collected as of November 16, 2018; results may have changed since then. Only races with two candidates from major parties are included.

Minnesota had two Senate elections, which is why it is listed twice. +10.6 indicates Tina Smith's margin of victory

Sources: Geoffrey Skelley, "Split-Ticket Voting Hit A New Low In 2018 Senate and Governor Races," FiveThirtyEight. November 19, 2018.