Roadmap

Sen. Kyrsten Sinema (D-AZ)

Background

Sinema represented Arizona's 9th district in the House from 2012-2019. In 2018, she was elected US Senator for Arizona for the first time. Prior to her public-service career, she worked as a social worker, attorney, professor, and instructor at the Center for Progressive Leadership, a Washington-based institute that trains activists in progressive policies. In 2010, she was elected to the Arizona State Senate, where she sponsored several bills aimed at curbing Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio's immigration policies, including targeted documentation checks. In Congress, Sinema was a member of the Blue Dog Coalition, comprising conservative Democrats, and the bipartisan Problem Solvers Caucus. She has a center-left voting record. In 2015 and 2016, she did not vote for Nancy Pelosi for majority leader. She has voted with her party 73 percent of the time. In 2017, she voted with President Trump's position roughly half of the time. She is the first openly bisexual Congress member.

Sen. Martha McSally (R-AZ)

Background

A Rhode Island native, McSally came to Arizona in the early 1990s when she was assigned to Davis-Monthan Air Force Base in Tucson. Two years after graduating from the US Air Force Academy, she received her MPP from Harvard. In 1999, McSally was selected for a Washington, D.C.-based fellowship program, where she served as a national security adviser to then-Sen. Jon Kyl (R-AZ). She served multiple tours in the Middle East and supervised an air campaign in Saudi Arabia for Operation Iraqi Freedom. She drew national attention after she filed—and won—a 2001 lawsuit against the Defense Department to overturn a policy that required US servicewomen based in Saudi Arabia to wear a body-covering Muslim abaya and headscarf. After retiring from the Air Force she ran unsuccessfully in 2012 to replace retiring-Rep. Gabrielle Giffords (D), but won in her second attempt in the 2014 general election by 167 votes. She announced in January 2018 that she would run to replace retiring Sen. Jeff Flake (R) and faced fellow Rep. Kyrsten Sinema (D-AZ-09) in the general election. She lost the general election, but Gov. Ducey (R-AZ) announced in late December 2018 that she would fill the vacant seat left by Sen. Jon Kyl (R), who had himself been appointed by Gov. Ducey to fill John McCain's vacant seat.

Sen. Rick Scott (R-FL)

Background

Scott enlisted in the US Navy after graduating high school, then attended college using the GI Bill. He had a 30-year career in business, first in the healthcare industry and then as a venture capitalist. After being elected governor in 2010, Scott focused primarily on the economy and jobs, with a campaign promise to create 700,000 jobs in the state. During his race for Senate against incumbent Bill Nelson, Scott made his record on job creation and tax cuts a key part of his platform. His 2018 senate run garnered national attention, as the race was too close to call up until the day of the election.

Sen. Mike Braun (R-IN)

Background

Prior to his 2018 election to federal office, Braun was a member of the Indiana House of Representatives from 2014 to 2017, when he resigned to focus on his Senate campaign. A lifelong Hoosier, Braun grew up in Jasper and attended Wabash College, then Harvard Business School. He is president and CEO of Meyer Distributing, an aftermarket vehicle parts distributor which he joined in 1981 and eventually bought. In his campaign, Braun highlighted his opposition to gun control and promised to push for an economic agenda of regulatory tailoring and tax simplification.

Background

Hawley was born in Lexington, Missouri and attended high school in Kansas City. He went on to attend Stanford University and Yale Law School. Following law school, Hawley clerked for the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals and then the US Supreme Court. In 2008, Hawley joined Hogan Lovells, LLC as an attorney, and worked there for three years. As a litigator, Hawley argued before the Supreme Court as one of the lead attorneys in the Hobby Lobby case. He later went on to become an associate professor at the University of Missouri School of Law, where he has continued to teach. Hawley is also the founder and president of the Missouri Liberty Project, an organization that aims to defend the US Constitution and fight government overreach. In 2017, Hawley became the attorney general of Missouri.

Sen. Kevin Cramer (R-ND)

Background

Cramer, a native of Kindred, North Dakota, was elected chairman of the North Dakota Republican Party in 1991, making him the youngest member of the Republican National Committee. During the 1990s, he worked for Gov. Ed Schafer as state tourism director and then state economic development and finance director. In 2003, Gov. John Hoeven appointed Cramer to the Public Service Commission, and he was elected to the position in 2004. In 2012, he was elected to the House, where he has served on the Energy and Commerce Committee and various subcommittees. He has expressed skepticism of climate change and thinks the Environmental Protection Agency often overreaches its authority. Cramer has voted against his party only 2.9 percent of the time, less often than House Republicans' average of 6.5 percent.

Sen. Mitt Romney (R-UT)

Background

Romney was born and raised in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan. After graduating from a joint JD-MBA program at Harvard, Romney worked as a consultant at Bain & Company; he eventually served as CEO. In 1994, Romney ran for US Senate in Massachusetts. After losing to Ted Kennedy, he resumed work at Bain and became CEO of the Salt Lake Organizing Committee for the 2002 Winter Olympics. After successfully helping organize the Winter Olympics, he again ran for office, this time running successfully for governor. As governor, Romney helped develop and sign into law Massachusetts health care reform legislation that established near-universal health care access by providing subsidies and enforcing individual mandates. In 2006, he campaigned for the Republican nomination in the 2008 US presidential election but lost to John McCain. In 2012, he was successfully nominated to be the Republican Party's presidential candidate, but lost to Barack Obama in the general election.

Rep. Ann Kirkpatrick (D-AZ-2)

Background

Kirkpatrick majored in Asian studies at the University of Arizona, where she also received her law degree. In 1980, Coconino County elected Kirkpatrick as its first woman deputy county attorney, and she later served as city attorney for Sedona, Arizona. Kirkpatrick is a former representative from Arizona's first congressional district. She lost her first reelection campaign in the 2010 midterms, but regained her seat in a close 2012 race. In 2016 she unsuccessfully challenged Republican Sen. John McCain for his U.S. Senate seat. After Republican Rep. Martha McSally announced she would run for Sen. Jeff Flake's open seat, Kirkpatrick announced she would run to fill the open second district seat, which encompasses most of Tucson.

Rep. Jahana Hayes (D-CT-5)

Background

Hayes entered electoral politics when Rep. Elizabeth Etsy announced her retirement. Hayes entered a competitive Democratic primary against Mary Glassman, a veteran of local Connecticut politics. Hayes won the primary with a commanding lead, having run a progressive campaign that emphasized her underdog story—she grew up homeless, was pregnant as a teenager and lived through economic hardship. Before entering politics, Hayes taught social studies in high school and was a National Teacher of the Year in 2016. Hayes is the first African-American Congress member from Connecticut and the first African-American woman to represent a New England state.

Underwood was born and raised in Naperville. She held a series of health care positions at the American Association of Colleges of Nursing, the NIH, and the Advisory Board Company from 2009 to 2010. From there, Underwood served in President Obama's administration in the Health and Human Services as a policy coordinator and a senior advisor to the president. Underwood ran with three issue priorities: health care, jobs, and education. She ran on the platform of expanding Affordable Care Act protections, investing in small businesses to create more local jobs, and increasing affordable education, paid family leave, and equal pay. When asked about President Trump and the Mueller investigation, Underwood maintained that she would support legislation to protect the special counsel from political interference.

Background

Trahan was born and raised in Lowell. She played Division I volleyball at Georgetown University. Her first job out of college was working for Rep. Marty Meehan, who represented Massachusetts' 5th District. She eventually became his chief of staff and top advisor. After working in politics, Trahan started a business consulting firm with two other women. Trahan won the 10-person Democratic primary by less than 150 votes.

Rep. Ayanna Pressley (D-MA-7)

Background

Born and raised in Chicago, Pressley attended Boston University from 1992 to 1994, but left school before graduating to support her mother, who had lost her job. After leaving college, she worked as a district representative for US Rep. Joseph Kennedy II, where she worked with senior citizens, veterans and people with disabilities in the district. In 2009, she served as US Sen. John Kerry's political director. Pressley was elected to the Boston City Council in 2009 and served until 2018, when she declared her intent to challenge incumbent Democrat Rep. Michael Capuano (MA-07). She defeated Capuano in the Democratic primary and – facing no Republican challenger in the general election – became the first African-American woman to represent Massachusetts. Pressley has championed universal health care and called for the defunding of US Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), and she stated on the campaign trail that ending sexual violence would be a priority during her tenure.

Background

Natives of the district, Slotkin's family ran Hygrade Foods, a prominent meat company in Southeast Michigan known for inventing Ball Park Franks. After graduate school, she was recruited to join the Central Intelligence Agency, where she served as a Middle East analyst. From there, she went on to work in the White House, the office of the Director of National Intelligence, the State Department, and the Defense Department, where she rose to the rank of acting assistant secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs. During her campaign, Slotkin refused to support Nancy Pelosi as House Democratic leader or accept corporate contributions to her campaign. She highlighted incumbent Rep. Mike Bishop's vote to repeal the Affordable Care Act as a key theme of her campaign.

Rep. Andy Levin (D-MI-9)

Background

Levin won a contested Democratic primary against two candidates, one of whom, Michigan State Rep. Ellen Lipton, had secured the backing of EMILY's List. Levin comes from a prominent Michigan political family. His dad, Sandy Levin represented the 9th district for over thirty years. Andy's uncle, Carl Levin, was Michigan's senior senator until he retired in 2015. Other members of the Levin family served in the federal judiciary in Michigan. Andy ran for Michigan Senate in 2006, losing a close election to Republican John Pappageorge. Prior to entering electoral politics, Andy worked as an attorney, as a clean energy entrepreneur, and in state government, where he helped to retrain Michigan workers for clean energy jobs.

Born in Rochester Hills, Michigan, Stevens is a native of the 11th district. She earned her bachelor's and master's degrees from American University, in Washington, D.C. Prior to entering electoral politics, she served as the chief of staff of the Treasury Department task force assigned to rescuing the auto industry after the 2007 financial crisis. Additionally, she served as a policy advisor to the Economic Development Administration. Stevens played a role in setting up the Office of Recovery for Automotive Communities and Workers and the White House Office of Manufacturing Policy. Outside of government, she worked on job training programs and STEM education initiatives in Michigan. Beating five other candidates in the Democratic primary, Stevens' platform emphasized the cost of prescription drugs and a need to encourage manufacturers and researchers to relocate to the district.

Background

The heir to the Phillips Distilling Company liquor fortune, as well as the step-grandson of Abigail Van Buren (better known as “Dear Abby”), Phillips is a relative newcomer to politics. Before entering politics, Phillips also served in a number of philanthropic roles throughout the Minneapolis area as the chair of the Phillips family foundations and several other charitable enterprises. Phillips also was chair of Talenti Gelato until the company was sold to Unilever. Notably, Phillips most recent business ventures were two coffee shops that pledged to offer a $15 minimum wage for their employees. Phillips campaigned against incumbent Erik Paulsen’s support for the repeal of the Affordable Care Act, though Phillips declined to back a “Medicare for-all” proposal. Phillips rejected corporate PAC donations and also pledged not to self-fund his campaign.

Rep. Xochitl Small (D-NM-2)

Background

Torres Small won the House seat left open by Rep. Steve Pearce. She grew up in Las Cruces, the daughter of a teacher and a social worker. After college, she returned to Las Cruces, where she worked as a field representative for Sen. Tom Udall, working to increase cell-phone service, broadband and other lines of communication in rural New Mexico. She later worked as a judicial law clerk for federal District Judge Robert Brack. Torres Small was as an attorney at Kemp Smith, working to protect the local water supply. In addition, she volunteered at homeless shelter, where she gave free counsel.

Rep. Mark Green (R-TN-7)

Background

Green is a member of the Tennessee State Senate as a Republican. Originally from Ashland City, Tennessee, he attended the US Military Academy at West Point. Following his time at West Point, Green served in the US army as an infantry officer, battalion personnel officer and airborne rifle company commander. Green went on to attend Wright State University where he earned an MD, and later became a flight surgeon in the Army. Green served in the Afghanistan War and the Iraq War, as well as participating in the military operation that captured Saddam Hussein. He has earned numerous military awards, including the Bronze Star and The Air Medal. Green authored a book about his experience interrogating Hussein, called A Night with Saddam. Following his military service, he founded Align MD, a company that provides staffing to hospitals across ten states. In 2012, Green was elected to the Tennessee state Senate and was later nominated to serve as the US Secretary of the Army by Donald Trump, although he withdrew his name.
